The Alaska Utility Supply Center (AUSC) Program

Supplying the Native Communities and Organizations of Rural Alaska

What is the Alaska Utility Supply Center?

The Alaska Utility Supply Center (AUSC) supplies components for water and wastewater systems. Founded in January 2001, with the goal of providing the highest quality service to Alaska Native communities, AUSC buys utility parts /supplies individually or in volume and passes on discounts to its members. Already, over 150 Native communities, 4 regional health corporations, and 20 projects have joined as members. AUSC is a branch of ANTHC's Division of Environmental Health & Engineering.

Why join the Alaska Utility Supply Center?

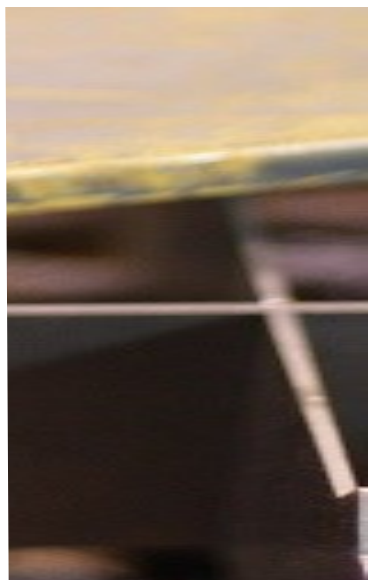

AUSC Staff is familiar with the sanitation needs of rural Alaska. Instead of calling several manufacturers and suppliers, you can call one number to find almost any component you need. Because AUSC is in Anchorage, service to rural Alaska is quick. AUSC buys supplies in volume and passes on savings to members. AUSC serves only Alaska Native communities and organizations (51% or more Native population). Trained and experienced staff help ensure you get the right part you ordered.

How can I find out more about the Alaska Utility Supply Center?

If you are an Alaska Native community, borough, Health Corporation, utility, school, or clinic, and you would like more information about AUSC, a catalog, or a membership application, please contact John Sims, AUSC Manager:

AIRVAC Vacuum Toilet Diagram

Water Valve: Brings clean water to the toilet and is activated by vacuum from the toilet controller.

Vent Filter: Filters the air brought into the vacuum toilet controller.

Backflow Preventer: Prevents the clean water supply from mixing with dirty water or other liquids from the toilet bowl.

Check Valve: Prevents dirty water from getting to the vacuum reservoir.

Push Button: Flushes the toilet.

Vacuum Toilet Controller: Controls the opening and closing of the water valve and the discharge valve.

Discharge Valve: Valve through which the contents of the toilet are removed.

Vacuum Reservoir: Makes sure there is enough vacuum reserve to fully open the water and discharge valves.

Understanding the Utility Billing Program

Billing for Water, Sewer, and Electricity Utilities

Do you need more money to operate your utility?

The Utility Billing Assistance Program is designed to help your utility by standardizing the billing process. By using this service, your community will have consistent utility billing, be able to better track utility transactions, have a documented history of customer billing, and increase your revenue—all of which can help rural utilities score higher with potential funding agencies. Please note that the collection of revenue is still done at the local level; this program only handles the billing. ANTHC is using QuickBooks, which is the standard accounting program for most communities in rural Alaska. This accounting program makes it easier to convert any existing local community accounts to our billing system.

How does it work?

The Utility Assistance Billing Program consists of an agreement between each community utility and ANTHC, which outlines the responsibilities of each party. The program provides each participant with a manual containing information about what the billing invoices may look like, as well as samples of ordinances and tariffs that can be used to create your own customized invoice to send to your customers. The manual also provides examples of possible letters that can be used to help explain why it is important to work together promote a unified utility service delivery program. In addition, the manual also discusses the opportunity for ANTHC, to help you complete a rate study. This study could provide you with the information needed to adjust your billing rate to be within 5 percent to 10 percent of the true cost of operating your utility. This is important to help bring your utility operational expenses closer to your revenue in order to move forward building capacity and enhance the sustainability of your utility system.

If you would like more information about the Utility Billing Assistance Program, please contact Francine Moreno, Office Manager:
